FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Forget the cracker joke: 124 tricks to steal the show this Christmas

Britain's leading magician, behind The Greatest Magician™ and The Man Who Was Magic™, teaches tricks and the stagecraft that make them land. Presales open 15 November and the book is out 1 December.

26 October 2026: Internationally renowned British magician James Phelan publishes new book: How to do Magic: Tricks, Secrets and Showmanship With Things You Already Own on 1 December 2026, with presales from 15 November.

Every one of its 124 tricks uses something already in the house: a coin, a napkin, a bread roll, a rubber band, or just yourself. It's the perfect Christmas present and an ideal Secret Santa gift: a stocking filler that gets everyone round the table watching. It arrives three weeks before the big day, when the props will already be on every family table.

THE STORY

James was four when a teacher told him he would never make anything of himself doing magic. Years later, she bought a front row ticket to one of his sold-out shows and waited at the end to apologise.

In between, he did his first show at 13 and built his own stage, self-funded from day one, using the inspiration his uncle, the late Paul Daniels, gave him for fuel.

> "Everyone starts with one small trick and it's enough to turn sceptics into believers and strangers into friends. This book gives you that first trick."

In 2017 he was playing to 30 people a night. In 2019 he played a 120-seat Edinburgh Fringe room that was often half full. In 2024 he became the first magician in history to sell out a two-week solo run at The Magic Circle. In 2025 he played the West End's Adelphi Theatre. And now, James' one-man show has grown into the most commercially successful magic show in the country, selling out 1,500-seater venues, 280 nights a year.

His lottery prediction on BBC radio's Trickster: Live jammed the switchboard, he left the judges speechless on Britain's Got Talent in April 2026, and The Man Who Was Magic continues playing to rapturous rooms.

Nobody teaches the half that makes a trick land: the performance. How to do Magic does, with a first trick for anyone aged 8 to 80 using things they already own. The book, perhaps, that a four-year-old, whose teacher didn't believe in him, once needed.

THE BOOK

How to do Magic runs to eleven chapters, from coin and restaurant magic to card tricks and mentalism. Most tricks need no sleight of hand. The only thing to buy is a thumb tip.

A section on performing covers what to say, where to look, how to beat nerves and how to recover when it goes wrong. It's written for anyone aged 8 to 80: complete beginners, families looking for something to do together, and seasoned performers who want to sharpen the tools in their repertoire.

> "I was taught very young it's never just the trick, it's also the performer. The trick is half of it. The other half is how you perform it, and nobody ever teaches you that. Until now."

LET'S TALK

James is available for interviews, features, reviews and extracts: in the studio, down the line or on a podcast. Review copies, images and a trick for your readers or listeners are ready to go.

Near a tour date? He'd love to invite you as his guest to an upcoming show, too.

READY-MADE SEGMENTS

1 The journalist's junk drawer
James performs live with whatever is on the desk: a pen, a mug, a phone. No set-up, real reactions.

2 Christmas dinner trick in 60 seconds
He teaches your audience one trick to do at the table this year with a napkin, coin or bread roll.

3 Naming the journalist's thought
A live mentalism moment. The journalist thinks of it, James names it. Works on radio as well as screen.

4 Christmas No.1, sealed and opened live
James seals his prediction of the Christmas No.1, or tomorrow's headlines, before the show, then it's opened live. His lottery prediction on BBC radio's Trickster: Live jammed the switchboard.

5 One trick to fool your colleague or co-host
James teaches the journalist a trick to try live on a colleague or co-host, or family, and listeners play along.

6 Told at four he'd never make it
The human story: a teacher's verdict, a self-funded climb, a speechless BGT panel and, at last, an apology.

7 The human lie detector
The journalist tells three truths and one lie, and James spots the lie. How easy is it to tell what people are thinking? Easier than you'd like.

8 Three tricks for the office party
Quick, easy tricks from the book to survive, and steal, the work Christmas do.

9 Three tries at Britain's Got Talent
James tried BGT at 13, got through at 23 just as his uncle Paul Daniels died, and finally made it at 33. A story for anyone who's ever wanted to give up.

Podcasters: James hosts How To Be Famous and is happy to swap guest spots.
